INTELLIGENCE BULLETIN
Counterterrorism Division/National Joint Terrorism Task Force

20 June 2011

(U//LES) Homegrown Violent Extremist Targeting of US Military Recruiting Centers Causes Concern for Law Enforcement

(U) LAW ENFORCEMENT SENSITIVE: The information marked (U//LES) in this document is the property of the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI). Distribution without FBI authorization is prohibited. Precautions should be taken to ensure this information is stored and/or destroyed in a manner that precludes unauthorized access. Information bearing the LES caveat may not be used in legal proceedings without first receiving authorization from the originating agency. Recipients are prohibited from subsequently posting the information marked LES on a Web site on an unclassified network.

(U//LES) Intelligence Community (IC) assessments of the recent attacks against military recruiting centers and personnel indicate a continued concern for future attacks on US soil. The FBI assesses with high confidence<sup>a</sup> that US military facilities will likely remain a focus of extremist activity. As noted in an 18 May 2011 Joint Intelligence Bulletin and as reporting from the past year has indicated, continued plotting and actualized attacks against military recruitment centers by homegrown violent extremists (HVEs) will likely continue.<sup>1</sup>

- (U//FOUO) During fiscal year 2010, the FBI received 55 Guardian database reports pertaining to incidents at military recruiting centers: 23 pertained to elicitation,<sup>b</sup> 14 involved surveillance, 13 expressed or implied threats, three related to vandalism, and two involved suspicious activity.<sup>2</sup>

(U) Source Summary Statement

(U//LES) This intelligence bulletin is based on credible investigative and human intelligence (HUMINT) information from FBI, DIA Reports and Digests, Naval Criminal Investigative Service (NCIS), and open source reporting from established online newspapers and published magazines. The FBI has high confidence in the information obtained from its investigations and those of other US government agencies (OGAs). In addition, the FBI has high confidence in the information cited from open sources, as the information has been corroborated through FBI and OGA reporting; some of the information obtained was also used in court proceedings.

<sup>a</sup> (U) High confidence generally indicates that the FBI's judgments are based on high-quality information or that the nature of the issue makes it possible to render a solid judgment. Medium confidence generally means that the information is credibly sourced and plausible, but can be interpreted in various ways, or is not of sufficient quality or corroborated sufficiently to warrant a higher level of confidence. Low confidence generally means that the information's credibility or plausibility is questionable, the information is too fragmented or poorly corroborated to make solid analytic inferences, or that the FBI has significant concerns or problems with the sources.

<sup>b</sup> (U//LES) Questions attempted to draw out information not associated with enlistment; questions included, but were not limited to, locations of recruiting stations, numbers of recruiters at station, work hours and schedules, statistics on recruits, and the physical layout of recruiting stations, such as the number of entrances.

- (U//FOUO) In the 2010 US Army Recruiting Command Serious Incident Report, 71 events involving suspicious activity with regard to recruiting centers were reported; the individuals asked inappropriate questions, took unauthorized photographs, and sent threats verbally and by mail.<sup>3</sup>

(U//FOUO) Terrorists can conduct attacks against soft targets—such as recruiting centers—within a short timeframe, with the use of minimal weaponry or materials, significantly diminishing the likelihood of identifying the plot and plotters.

- (U) According to open source reporting corroborated by FBI investigations, between 17 October and 1 November 2010, unidentified subjects fired shots overnight at the National Museum of the Marine Corps on two separate occasions: at a Marine Corps recruiting station in Chantilly, Virginia, and at a Coast Guard recruiting station in Woodbridge, Virginia.<sup>4,5,6</sup>
- (U) On 19 October 2010, an unidentified individual stabbed an Air Force recruiter in the back with scissors at a recruiting center in Fairview, Illinois.<sup>7</sup>
- (U) In the Fall 2010 issue of al-Qa'ida's online magazine Inspire, editor Yahya Ibrahim notes the advantages of random shootings. These require a short timeframe, involve the least preparation, and “eliminate the chances of the Feds catching wind of what’s going to happen.”<sup>8</sup>

(U) Contributing factors to recruitment center vulnerability include minimal levels of security and easy public access to the facilities, which are commonly housed in multipurpose structures. Few recruiting offices are located in federal buildings under the provided security of the Federal Protective Services (FPS).

- (U//FOUO) On 8 December 2010, the FBI arrested US person and Muslim convert Muhammad Hussain, a.k.a. Antonio Benjamin Martinez, as part of a sting operation. Martinez allegedly attempted to detonate what he believed was a real explosive inside a vehicle parked in a Catonsville, Maryland Armed Forces Career Center parking lot. According to FBI and Department of Homeland Security (DHS) reporting, the actions of Martinez “highlight the continuing interest of US-based individuals in planning or participating in attacks against the Homeland.”<sup>9</sup> Open source reporting described Martinez as “obsessed with jihad and fighting the US military here and abroad.”<sup>10</sup> Martinez reportedly followed Usama bin Laden and refers to al-Qa'ida in the Arabian Peninsula (AQAP) associate, US person Anwar al-Aulaqi, as his “beloved sheikh.”<sup>11</sup>
- (U) According to reliable Defense Intelligence Agency (DIA) reporting, in early June 2009 US person Abdul Hakim Muhammad, a.k.a. Carlos Bledsoe, conducted a small arms attack against a US military recruiting center in Little Rock, Arkansas, killing one soldier and wounding a second soldier.<sup>12</sup> FBI and DHS reporting highlights that Bledsoe simply drove up to the recruiting center and opened fire.<sup>13,14</sup>

(U) Outlook

(U//FOUO) The FBI assesses with high confidence that in the future, HVEs will likely continue to pose a threat to military recruiting centers and personnel on US soil, causing concern for the IC and law enforcement officials (LEOs), as improvisation and plots that require little planning are more difficult to detect, monitor, or disrupt.

(U//LES) In response to the increased threat to military recruiting centers and personnel, the National Joint Terrorism Task Force's (NJTTF) Military Operations Support Team (MOST)<sup>c</sup> has initiated a number of support measures, to include the following:

- (U//LES) Established single points of action for each recruiting command center with a 24-hour point of contact (POC) to solidify lines of communication between the NJTTF, MOST, and all military recruiting commands;
- (U//LES) Initiated the establishment of a single POC with the Military Entrance Processing Command (MEPCOM)<sup>d</sup>, which will further enhance sharing of real time investigative information pertinent to ongoing threats;
- (U//LES) Conducted briefings to recruiting commands concerning the MOST's Recruiting Command Initiative, current and potential threats to all military recruiting commands, and the importance of a deconfliction method regarding threat information;
- (U//LES) Created a MOST outreach program to provide timely terrorist alerts for immediate dissemination to recruiting command POCs and the appropriate Joint Terrorism Task Forces (JTTFs), whether it is a physical threat to a military recruiting command, or a person of interest attempting to enter the military.
